500. ADMINISTRATIVE ORGANIZATION

This chapter presents a brief summary of the statutory provisions for the overall employment security agency, the advisory councils, and the appeals authorities. All these provisions emphasize the public interest in the program as well as the interest of employers and employees as the groups most immediately concerned.

505 Place of the Employment Security Agency in the State Government

There are no Federal requirements concerning the form of State administrative organization or its position in the State government. The Wagner-Peyser Act, the basic law of the employment service, requires that States designate, or authorize the creation of, a State agency vested with all powers necessary to cooperate with the U.S. Training and Employment Service. The Social Security Act requires that State laws must include provision for making such reports containing such information as the Secretary of Labor may require. All the State laws include provisions that meet these specific Federal requirements and a general statement on Federal-State cooperation.

The administrative organization of the employment security agencies shows considerable diversity. Some State employment security agencies are independent boards or commissions. Others are independent departments of State governments, reporting directly to the Governor. The remainder are in State departments of labor. These various types of administrative organization are outlined in the three parts of Administration Table 1.

505.01 Independent board or commission.—The employment security or unemployment compensation commissions or boards are made up of 3 to 7 members, usually 3, appointed by the Governor, except in South Carolina where members of the commission are elected by the State general assembly. In Michigan the commission is by law in, but not subject to, the Department of Labor.

The interest of employer and labor groups and of the public in the program is recognized in the statutory provisions for tripartite membership in some States. In the District of Columbia and Michigan, employer and employee groups must be represented. In Mississippi, where the three members represent the three State supreme court districts, one member must be a representative of workers. Indiana requires one representative of large employers and one of independent merchants and small employers as well as two representatives of labor. In other States, commission members are in practice representative of interest groups.

Iowa, Maine, Michigan, Montana, and Wyoming require that the membership of the commission be bipartisan in character. In addition, Michigan requires that employers and employees be represented, and Iowa and Maine specify that membership include representation from employers, labor, and the public.

In some States the Governor designates the chairman of the commission; in other States the commission or board elects its own chairman. In a few States with tripartite representation on the commission, the public member is chairman by statute; in other States the public member is, in practice, chairman. The Commissioner is chairman of the District of Columbia Unemployment Compensation Board, but he may delegate this authority.

In six States¹ the chairman of the commission is the executive officer of the employment security agency. In five States² with per diem or part-time commissions and South Carolina with a full-time commission, the commission appoints a full-time executive director or administrator. In Indiana the Governor appoints a full-time executive director who is secretary of the Board. In Arizona the part-time employment security commission itself supervises the two coordinate divisions, the Arizona State Employment Service Division and the Unemployment Compensation Division.

505.02 Independent departments of State government.—The independent departments or bureaus of employment, employment security, employment services, economic security, or unemployment compensation represent another type of administrative development (Administration Table 1B). The administration of the program is headed by a director, executive director, commissioner, or administrator appointed by the Governor. In Kentucky the bureau of employment security is a part of a department of economic security which includes a bureau of social services. In Massachusetts, the division of employment security is by law in, but not subject to, the department of labor and industries.

505.03 In State department of labor or other agency.—Some States have placed their employment security divisions in the State department of labor, or industrial relations, or labor and industry, or labor and industrial relations, or under the State industrial commission. In recent years a few States have moved the employment security division into a human relations or human resources agency.

In most of these States (Administration Table 1C), the division of employment security or of employment is an integrated employment security agency headed by a director, executive director, or administrator. In Florida and Wisconsin, separate unemployment compensation and employment services divisions report to the department of labor.

ADMINISTRATION

505.04 Merit selection of employees.—One of the Federal requirements for administrative grants to States under the Social Security Act is that the State unemployment insurance law make provision for “methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis, except that the Secretary of Labor shall exercise no authority with respect to the selection, tenure of office, and compensation of any individual employed in accordance with such methods.” All State laws have made provision for appointment on a merit basis of personnel administering the unemployment insurance programs, with the exception of the policymaking heads of the agency. In the States with a civil service law applicable to all departments of State government, appointment of employment security personnel is in accordance with State civil service regulations. Employees of the District of Columbia Unemployment Compensation Board are appointed under the Federal civil service regulations. In States without statewide civil service systems, employees are appointed under merit systems which were established to meet the requirements of the Social Security Act.

510 Advisory Councils

All but three State laws provide for statewide advisory councils. In 47 States such a council is mandatory; in 2 permissive. Hawaii and Montana have appointed advisory councils though there are no statutory requirements for such councils. In 27 States the council is appointed by the Governor, in 15 States by the employment security administrative authority, and in 9 States by the overall administrative agency (Administration Table 2).

510.01 Purpose of advisory councils.—In most States the councils are for the purpose of aiding the agency in formulating policies and meeting problems relating to the administration of the employment security act, and in assuring impartiality and freedom from political influence in the solution of such problems. The council can make recommendations on its own to the Governor and/or the legislature in 12 States.³ In Massachusetts the council reports to the Governor at least quarterly and to the legislature annually; in New York, to the Governor and legislature annually; in Missouri, to the Governor and legislature biennially; and in Pennsylvania, to the Governor periodically. In New Jersey the employment security council reports to the Governor and the legislature annually and at such other times as it may deem in the public interest. The Wisconsin council reports to each biennial legislature; in addition, it may report to the proper legislative committee on any pending unemployment insurance bill.

ADMINISTRATION

In Colorado the council must approve expenditures from the special administrative fund. The California council is, by statute, limited to problems relating to administration of the employment service. The Illinois Board of Unemployment Compensation and Free Employment Office Advisors and the Board of Local Illinois Free Employment Office Advisors for each employment office are established by the Illinois Civil Administrative Code.

510.02 Representation on councils.—Equal representation of labor and employer groups is specifically provided in all States except Idaho and Texas, and one or more public members in all States except Michigan, Oklahoma, and Wisconsin. In Texas the council must be composed of persons representing employers, employees, and the public, but equal representation is not specified. In Idaho the director is to prescribe the qualifications of the members. In New Jersey no more than four members of the council may be of the same political party. In Nebraska two members must have no interest either as employers or employees, and in Missouri and Ohio at least three members must be individuals whose training and experience qualify them to deal with the technical, economic, and social aspects of unemployment insurance. Fourteen States^{*} provide that women must be represented on the advisory council; in practice they are represented on other State councils. New Jersey has a separate advisory council on disability benefits.

In Nevada the executive director of the employment security department, and in Ohio the chief of the division of research, serve as ex officio secretary of the respective councils. In Oklahoma the chairman of the employment security commission is ex officio chairman of the council, and in Pennsylvania the secretary of labor and industry is ex officio a member of the council; the secretary appoints a member of his staff as secretary of the council. In Wisconsin a salaried employee of the industrial commission is chairman of the State council and of each local or industry committee.

510.03 Special councils.—Thirty-one States (see Administration Table 2) provide for local and industry or special councils as well as a statewide advisory council, but in only four States is their appointment mandatory. In all States except Illinois, Maryland, and West Virginia, the local State councils are appointed by the same authority as the State councils; in Illinois the director of the department of labor and in Maryland the executive director of the department of employment security appoint the local councils; in West Virginia the State advisory council appoints the local councils for a limited and temporary period. Local councils also must ordinarily be representative of employees, employers, and the public; however the permissive provisions in Arizona, Arkansas, Indiana, and Washington contain no statements concerning membership of the special councils. In Nevada the farm labor council must include representatives of substantial commodity interests so that the problems peculiar to each commodity group will be considered in State planning and administration.

515 Appeal Authorities

Among the requirements of the Social Security Act for Federal financing of the State administration of unemployment insurance is provision in the law for "opportunity for a fair hearing before an impartial tribunal, for all individuals whose claims for unemployment compensation are denied." All State laws provide for such appeal tribunals; all but a few provide for two appeal stages (Administration Table 3A) before cases can be appealed to the State courts. Obviously the provisions differ considerably from State to State with differences in the appeals load, in the overall administering pattern, in the geographic characteristics of the State, and other factors. In all States, not only individuals whose claims are denied but employers who have an interest have a right to appeal decisions on claims. Administration Table 3 is concerned with administrative and judicial review applicable to claims determinations. Where review involves employer liability only, there may be different time limits and different hearings bodies.

515.01 First appeals stage.—About one-half of the State laws provide that appeals at the initial stage are to be heard by a single referee or examiner. In most of the other States the law provides that an appeal may be heard by a referee (or examiner) or by a referee (or examiner) and two associates, the associates representing the interests of employers and employees, on a per diem basis. In Connecticut, where there is only one appeal stage, the Governor appoints six commissioners, one for each of five specified geographic areas and one for the State at large, to be known collectively as the unemployment commission. The commissioners ordinarily hear cases singly, but any commissioner may request that two or more additional commissioners sit at a particular hearing.

The number of days for appealing to the first stage appeals body is generally stated in terms of "days"; however, in almost one-half of the States the period used is defined as "calendar days." Among these States Maryland excludes Sundays and holidays; Massachusetts and Michigan extend the time if the last day falls on a Saturday, Sunday, or holiday; Missouri if the last day falls on a Sunday or holiday; New Jersey, Ohio (by court decision), and Pennsylvania exclude the day of mailing; also the last day if it falls on a

Saturday, Sunday, or holiday. Massachusetts further provides for excluding a Saturday, Sunday, or holiday from the 5-day period after delivery of a determination or decision, but including them in the 7-day period after mailing.

Of the States which do not define "day," Connecticut excludes Sundays or holidays and extends the time if the last day for filing falls on a day when the unemployment offices are closed; Louisiana extends the time if the last day falls on a Saturday, Sunday, or holiday; and California, Nevada, and Washington exclude the day of mailing and the last day if it falls on a Saturday, Sunday, or holiday.

The number of days for filing an appeal after notice of the determination varies among the States, ranging from 5 to 30 days. Only Indiana provides for a special appeal period (7 days) after the mailing of a monetary determination. In a few States the time may be extended if good cause is shown. In Minnesota there is a specific extension of time—from 7 to 10 calendar days after delivery or from 7 to 12 calendar days after mailing of the determination. In Missouri when an appeal is not filed on time, an order is mailed to the claimant dismissing the appeal. But if requested within 10 days from the date of mailing the order, a hearing will be scheduled on the timeliness and merits of the appeal.

Idaho, Michigan, and Ohio provide that an appeal can be taken only from a redetermination. This redetermination is subject to the same time limitation as is the appeal to the referee.

In all but a few States the decision of the first-stage appeals body is final in absence of an appeal. In other States the referee may reconsider his decision within the appeal period (see footnote 8 to Administration Table 3A). The Nebraska law permits the commissioner to reopen the appeal tribunal decision on request within 90 days from the date of mailing on the basis of fraud, mistake, or new evidence. The appeal tribunal then holds a further hearing on the factors contributing to the reopening. In New Jersey every decision of the appeal tribunal may be considered by the board of review, which may let the decision stand, remand it to another appeal tribunal for a new hearing, or withdraw the case to itself. Puerto Rico and Rhode Island provide that any determination or decision of the referee may be reopened if a worker or employer has been defrauded or coerced in connection with the decision; the time limitation is within 60 days of the knowledge of fraud or removal of coercion.

515.02 Second appeals stage.—About one-half of the States have a board of review or board of appeals or appeals board to hear cases appealed from the decision of the lower appeal tribunal (Administration Table 3A). All these boards consist of three members, except New York and California which have five. The Florida Board of Review is composed of the chairman of the industrial commission, who is chairman, and the members of the commission. The Mississippi Board is appointed by the employment security commission, and the New Jersey Board of Review by the director of the division of employment security; in the other States, the appeals board is appointed by the Governor.

The members of the appeals boards represent labor, employers, and the public in seven States⁵; but in West Virginia, the Governor may not appoint anyone who is identified with the interests of either employers or employees. In Indiana, Ohio, Oregon, and Rhode Island, no more than two members, and in New York, no more than three members, may belong to the same political party; and in Oklahoma, no member may serve as an officer of any political party organization during his term of office.

In one-half of the States the second appeals stage is handled by an existing commission or agency head. These States include all but 4⁶ of the 14 States headed by an independent commission or board; the board which constitutes the administrative agency functions as the appeals board. In Missouri and Wisconsin where the agency is under the State industrial commission, these overall agencies serve as the appeals board. Idaho utilizes the industrial accident board, part time, as the unemployment insurance appeals board. The Kentucky Commissioner of Economic Security and two associate commissioners constitute the unemployment insurance commission which serves as appeals board and adopts rules and regulations.

In Minnesota, South Dakota, Virginia, and Washington, the Commissioner in charge of the independent employment security agency hears second-stage appeals, and in Alaska and Puerto Rico the commissioner or secretary of labor carries out this function.

The number of days in the period for appeal to the second-stage appeals body are designated as "calendar days" in only eight States, of which Minnesota and Vermont so designate only the days after delivery of the referee's decision; Vermont further stipulates that the time limit to appeal to the board is within 6 days from the date of the return receipt of registered or certified mailing of the referee's decision. Five States extend the time for filing for good cause.

Connecticut, Hawaii, Nebraska, and New Hampshire provide for only one administrative appeal which is to the first-stage appeals body. The claimant would then appeal for judicial review in the appropriate court.

About one-fourth of the States provide that a contested determination which involves a labor dispute shall be appealed directly to the second-stage appeals body. In some States a special examiner is designated to determine the original claim. In Arkansas the period for appeal to the second-stage appeals body from a decision concerning a labor dispute is shortened from the normal 15 days to 7 days; in North Dakota from a 12-day period to one of 7 days after delivery or 10 days after mailing.

⁶ Indiana, Michigan, Mississippi, and Oklahoma.

ADMINISTRATION

515.03 Judicial review.—All the States provide for appeals to the courts for judicial review. The time limit ranges from 10 to 60 days, and in California to 4 years. About one-half of the States designate a specific time to exhaust actions before the second administrative appeal body, whose decision is then final. These States provide an additional period of time in which to seek judicial review commencing when the decision is final.

California and New Jersey have no provisions in their unemployment insurance laws for appeals to the court. In California the time for filing (4 years) is governed by the Statute of Limitations and the appropriate court by interpretation of the Civil Code; in New Jersey the time is governed by court rule.

Instead of allowing a time based on the delivery or mailing of the decision, four States count the days from the date of the second-stage appeal decision (District of Columbia and New Mexico), after the decision was made (Kentucky), or entered (Vermont); Hawaii, which allows only one administrative appeal, counts the days for judicial review from the service of the referee's decision.

In Colorado the claimant must appeal within 10 days to the Commission for a review of its decision before he may appeal to the court. In North Carolina he must file a notice of intent to appeal before the commission's decision is final. Indiana allows an extension of 30 days from the date of a notice of intention to appeal to the court if made within the 15-day period from the date of mailing the board's final decision.

Thirty-five State laws specify the location of the court. In one-third of the States the location is determined (1) by the county in which the claimant resides; (2) by the county in which the claimant last worked (three States); by (1) or (2) (seven States); (3) by the county where the claim was filed (seven States).

*Administrative or judicial review applicable to claims determinations. Where review involves employer liability only, there may be different time limits and different hearings bodies.

² May be extended for good cause. In Minnesota time is extended to 10 calendar days after delivery or 12 calendar days after mailing after which time determination is final. In Missouri when appeal is not filed on time, an order is mailed dismissing appeal. If requested within 10 days from date of mailing the order, a hearing will be scheduled on timeliness and merits of appeal.

³ Only one administrative appeal.

⁵ Refers to nonmonetary determination—allows 15 days for claimant or employer located in Alaska, Hawaii, or Puerto Rico.

⁶ The longer period applies after notification is mailed to last known address of interstate claimant.

⁷ Within 6 days from date of return receipt of registered mail.

⁸ Referee may reconsider his decision: within 30 days after service in absence of appeal for judicial review (Hawaii); within 15 days after mailing (Michigan); within 10 days after mailing provided no further appeal has been filed or board has not transferred claim to itself (Ohio); within 30 days of delivery or mailing if no appeal to board of review (Tennessee).

⁹ Or 3 examiners assigned by board; member of board; the board.
